01 of 08 The Waterproof Jacket Marmot PreCip is a solid candidate for travel during the rainy seasons. The jacket is built for active lifestyles, whether climbing, walking or backpacking. To combat rain, the PreCip also sports fully glued seams to prevent leaks, as well as an attached hood that rolls when not in use. To keep it dry, it features Marmot's comfortable and breathable NanoPro waterproofing fabric technology. Even if it resumes rainwater, the jacket will feel breathable when your activity levels are high. In addition to the material, the PreCip provides breathability with its well zippers, which are zippered ventilation openings under the arms. The angel-wing movement's built-in design also allows for total mobility, so you can move freely in the jacket. PreCip portability is an added benefit for travelers. The jacket weighs 9.6 ounces and can be packed into your inner pocket. Color selection is limited, but still offers interesting and bold choices. Choose from gemstone, green grenade, lithium and atomic blue.

02 of 08 From $30, you can get a high quality rain jacket from Columbia's Switchback II line. The waterproof fabric of the jacket uses Omni-Shield technology, which is a water repellent and stains that keeps you feeling dry and looking clean. To protect against rain, enjoy your clandestine hood that you can hide when the rain stops. As for how the jacket feels, it has a classic comfortable fit that allows for a wide range of moves, whether you're on an intense or sinuous trail for a coffee. For breathability, it features a rear ventilation system to keep you cool as you embark on your adventures. In terms of storage, the Switchback II includes two zippered hand pockets that you can use to carry your keys, phone and other miscellaneous items. When it gets hot, pack the jacket in your hand pocket. In terms of color, switchback II has a generous collection of over 15 bright and cheerful shades, including blue heron, purple lotus and wild geranium.

03 of 08 Nothing is as elegant as a trench coat for rainy weather. For casual city tours in light to moderate rain, the Columbia Forgiveness trench jacket will keep you protected from wet weather. It sports a modern classic fit and comes with an adjustable belt. Unlike most trench coats, it comes with an adjustable drawcord hood so you can protect your head from rain. The selection of colors goes beyond its typical black or beige trenches. You can choose between black, cypress, flint, sage and yellow ray, to name a few. In addition to looking elegant, the jacket is also very functional in the rain. When you are sweating, there is a ventilation system on the back that allows breathability so you can stay dry and cold. Like the other Selection, the Pardon jacket is treated with Omni-Shield water and stain repellent technology that keeps you looking clean and feeling dry. The jacket also includes zippered hand pockets for small items such as your keys, phone and wallet.

04 of 08 The North Face produces great outdoor clothing for travelers and athletes, and this excellent light rain jacket is no exception. The Venture II Jacket is versatile for all seasons. It sports a relaxed fit and an adjustable hood, which allows you to use a few layers underneath it. Your layering ability is an asset when you're walking or running during the winter. When it gets hot, you can peel off the raincoat and pack it in one of its two zippers. Besides being great for layers, the jacket is also breathable. The waterproof, sewing-sealed DryVent shell uses a polyurethane coating consisting of a tri-component, multi-layered formula for water protection and durability. For extra breathability, the Venture II has pit-zip ventilation. The Venture II has an extensive selection of colors that includes over 15 options such as black, grey, honeysuckle pink and heather green pool. Continue to 5 of 8 below.

05 of 08 Patagonia's Torrentshell Jacket is a reliable raincoat that keeps you dry and is produced with the environment in mind. The raincoat uses a waterproof and breathable 2.5-layer shell that has a 100% recycled nylon ripstop face. Facial tissue is approved by bluesign, which means that the manufacturer is committed to a production process that prioritizes sustainability and consumer safety. In addition to its commitment to the environment, Patagonia has also designed a high quality jacket that will keep you protected from rain. The two-way adjustable hood has a laminated visor that rolls down and holds with a simple cable and hook design. The microfleece-coated neck offers comfort alongside the skin and keeps you dry with a waterproof, breathable barrier. You will also be able to adjust the cuffs and waist to seal the cold or get a secure fit. Other features include the two zippered hand warmer pockets and ventilation pit zippers that come with exterior storm flaps and DWR-treated zippers. To hide the jacket, pack it in a hand warmer pocket, one of which comes with a clip-in carabiner loop. Colors include birch white, black, navy blue and navy blue/navy blue, to name a few.

06 of 08 Rei's Co-op Rainier Jacket, like the Torrentshell of Patagonia, is also approved by bluesign. What we like most about it, however, is that its recycled ripstop bark will keep you covered in wind up to 100 km/h. For water protection, the raincoat features waterproof sealed seams and a DWR finish to cast light rain. In the rainy weather, the Rainier has a three-piece hood with double adjustments to your fit is extra secure. In addition to protecting your belongings from wet weather, zippered hand pockets can also be used to pack the jacket when you no longer need it. Rainier is breathable. Breathable. Hot. When you are sweating, you can use the pit zippers to aesthetise excess heat. On the other hand, if you want to keep the cold off, you can use your cord swings and hook and loop cuffs to seal the precipitation and wind. The color selection is modest, but still offers a range of options. You can choose between beachstone grey, black, pink flash, pacific blue/midnight marine, and pepper/cocoa.

07 of 08 Charles River Apparel's Front Pocket Classic Pullover is a low maintenance jacket that you can quickly throw on your clothes, whether you are running errands or hiking. It is large, designed to be oversized and comfortable. It is made of a wind and water resistant nylon material that will keep you dry in rainy weather. Like many rain jackets, it has a cord swing that you can pull to keep the cold off. On the flannel-lined neck, it features an extended zipper that you can pull up to keep warm. Instead of small hand pockets, the pullover has a spacious single front pocket where you can store large miscellaneous objects. Colors include forest, brown, navy, orange, white, black, cardinal and royal blue, to name a few.

08 of 08 Aspire Jacket from Outdoor Search offers long-lasting protection as well as features adapted to high levels of activity in the rain. The hood is fully adjustable and has a front storm flap. To help you keep the cold off, the Aspire has elastic cuffs and takes off the hem to seal in heat. Not to mention it is also windproof and fully glued. You can stay dry in style — the range of playful colors includes batik/Baltic, black, elderberry, oasis, pewter/typhoon and samba. Rain protection is one thing, but comfort is another. For starters, you won't feel too hot on the Aspire. It uses waterproof and breathable Gore-Tex fabric that can withstand the wear and tear of your travels. When you are sweating, you can take advantage of torso side zippers that allow you to turn the jacket into a poncho for extra ventilation. Plus, the raincoat is easy to carry—your left pocket also serves as a bag of things. The Aspire jacket also features a climbing highlight. Climbers will enjoy the raincoat carbine tie, dual-split central front zipper and pocket placement well above the harness area.
